I live in the kelvindale area, and have just been made aware that it is planned to close Kelvindale, Maryhill and Gilshochill Railway stations. The cutting of public services is a self-fulfilling exercise, as as soon as services are diminished, it is difficult to make proper use of them, vide the No11 bus. As it comes so infrequently down the Clevedon Road, I find it difficult to use, and am driven to use my car to Great Western road to catch a bus there. This goes against my wish to use my car as little as possible because of pollution aspects. If the use of cars is seriously being desired by local or central authorities, public services HAVE to be at least maintained, but in reality increased.
